

POSITION ANNOUNCEMENT - SPEECH LANGUAGE PATHOLOGIST

The Sean Parker Institute for the Voice at Weill Cornell Medicine is recruiting a full-time adult speech-language pathologist to join our expanding multidisciplinary team. Candidates must have a solid foundation and interest in voice, and experience with rehabilitation of vocal performers is strongly encouraged. Special consideration will also be given to candidates with experience/interest in clinical research. Job responsibilities will include evaluation and treatment of laryngologic diagnoses, including acoustic and aerodynamic assessment, participation in research, and presentations at institutional and national meetings. Please note that we are unable to accept clinical fellows at this time.

The Parker Institute provides the full spectrum of laryngologic care in the performing arts, media and business hub of the nation. Housed in a new, purpose-built space equipped for complete diagnostic laryngeal assessment and treatment interventions, the Institute is dedicated to evidence-based voice care and high-level clinical research.
